About the project

Educational institutions from Norway, Denmark, Poland, Spain, and Portugal have collaborated in the Erasmus+ KAIII project Co-created Education through Social Inclusion (COSI.ed) 2020-2024. The main goals have been two-fold 1) to upscale a comprehensive European model for social inclusion of young people at risk and 2) a policy recommendation on social inclusion of children and youth. The partners have built on the proven good practice of the Erasmus+ project KAII Marginalisation and Co-created Education<sup>1</sup> and tested out the MaCE- model of social inclusion in five countries and six different contexts. Throughout the project all the partners have collaborated and co-created regionally as well as internationally upscaling the regional experiences to a sustainable European COSI.ed model and policy recommendations.

All the work in the project is based on the understanding and belief that professionals and young people co-create as part of a community of practice<sup>2</sup>. Here experts (professionals like teachers, other school-professionals, and researchers) and beginners (young people) work side by side, learning together and jointly developing knowledge and competence. This co-creating process entails giving voice to vulnerable young people to understand their life- and educational story and through this process identify aspects of the young disadvantaged persons' situation that may hinder or support further learning. Through the project the young people learn about themselves and how to excel, while the professionals develop skills and understanding to socially include young people. The hypothesis is that co-created education and training in which disadvantaged young people, professionals, stakeholders, and policymakers take part, will contribute to the educational and social inclusion of groups that have traditionally been marginalised.

What you are about to read, is one of the deliveries in the project. If you need a quick more practical overview of the project, take a look at this video.
